In 1997 Royal Mail signed new printing contracts. The contract for the high value definitives "Castles" received the Dutch printing company Enschedé. They started to re-engage the printing plates. The stamps show a lot of differences to the former Harrison printings. Most of them are better visible under a strong magnifying glass. The best way to distinguish Type I/II from Type III is to look at the inscriptions. The letter "C" of the Type III has no top serif and the tail of the letter points upwards. Generally the details of the buildings are to be seen better in the new engravings.

80th Anniversary of Marvel Comics – Self-adhesive booklet stamps

An exclusive Marvel team-up

Captain Britain has been the UK's protector for years but in the exclusive strip created for Royal Mail – illustrated by legendary British artist Alan Davis – the hero faces his toughest challenge yet: Thanos, the Mad Titan. Obsessed by death, Thanos has attempted to bring destruction and chaos to the UK only for Captain Britain to call on his closest allies to stop him in his tracks. The featured heroes can all be seen on the stamps in the collection. This unique strip is far more than an exciting Marvel mini epic – some of the panels are also stamps that can be used to send Marvel's heroes across the country, as Royal Mail and Marvel combine to stamp out evil across the world.
