SHIPS OF MALAWI

M.V. MPASA

M.V. Mpasa was built as a passenger and cargo vessel by Harland and Wolff Ltd. Belfast in 1922 and was launched at Chipoka in December, 1925. In 1960 the vessel was modified to carry cargo only, having a capacity for 27,400 gallons of fuel and 60 tons of dry cargo.

M.V. ILALA II

Ilala II, the largest vessel to operate on Lake Malawi, was built by Yarrow & Co. of Glasgow and launched on Lake Malawi in 1951. The vessel has a displacement of 620 tons, carries 120 tons of cargo and 461 passengers (11 cabin class, 50 second class and 400 third class).

Ilala I, named after the district where David Livingstone died, was the first steamer to operate on Lake Malawi in 1875 and was brought out by the Free Church of Scotland.

M.V. CHAUNCY MAPLES

The m.v. Chauncy Maples was acquired by Malawi Government in 1963 to provide a passenger service between Monkey Bay and intermediate ports to Nkhata Bay. The vessel was converted from steam to diesel and entered passenger service with Malawi Railways in 1967, and is capable of carrying 180 passengers and 30 tons of cargo. The superstructure has recently been extended.

M.V. NKWAZI

The m.v. Nkwazi was built by Yarrow & Co. in 1955, and is the main cargo vessel on the Lake, with a capacity for 200 tons of dry cargo.

TOUR DE

LAURENT FIGNON      BERNARD HINAULT

THE DECADE
1980-1990

This decade has the name, Bernard Hinault, written all over it. After having won "easily" in the 1978, 1979, 1981 and 1982 Tours (if such accomplishments could be thought of as easy) Hinault astonished the media and critics who felt his past victories were without a true challenge, by overcoming an impressive field in a great comeback to win the 1985 Tour. In the intervening years, Frenchman Laurent Fignon captured the 1983 and 1984 championships. In 1985 Hinault earned his nickname "Blaireau" (badger) as he faced dangerous adversaries in the new climbing genius, Lucho Herrera and teammate, American, Greg Lemond, who would win in 1986. Hinault described his effort as artistic, "I rode with art, like a painter working on a picture." A pact with Greg Lemond resulted in the American's supremacy in 1986 and 1989.
