People just can't stop talking about that Mona Lisa. Why is she smiling? What's her story? Some people think her mysterious grin meant she was secretly pregnant, but that would be unlikely in conjunction with another theory: that Mona Lisa is actually a self-portrait of Leonardo! X-rays of the painting and close comparison with drawings of Leonardo suggest that this may actually be true.

St. George & The Dragon

St. George was a 4th century patron saint of England. It is told that he was a soldier in the imperial army who gave his life for the faith in Asia Minor.

St. George's life is cloaked in legends: One of the great saints of the Eastern church, and an Ancient patron of soldiers, he was adopted by England in the late middle ages. In old plays and in art, St. George is the slayer of the Dragon.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Bright Eyes

Bright Eyes was the first starring vehicle written especially for Shirley Temple. The Christmas-themed story featured orphaned Shirley as the darling of a local airport, and showcased her singing talent with the tune that became her signature song, "On the Good Ship Lollipop." Shirley's role as a child torn between her love for a pilot who is determined to adopt her, and the fatherly affection of the wealthy, eccentric uncle of the family she lives with is considered by many to be one of her best performances. The puppy who played Shirley's companion in the film became a famous star in her own right: a few years after her performance in Bright Eyes, she starred as "Toto" in The Wizard of Oz!

750TH ANNIVERSARY
OF THE CITY OF BERLIN

In September of 1930 an area of 4 square kilometres in the Reinickendorf (Berlin) was leased for the use of the 'Spaceship Society' as a rocket airfield. Considerable work had at this time already been completed to develop the 'MIRAK' (minimum rocket). The 'MIRAK' would then provide a basis for the construction of future high performance rockets to be used for space exploration.

FLOWERS OF THE WORLD

Famous People and Events of the Twentieth Century

二十世纪的中國領袖和事件

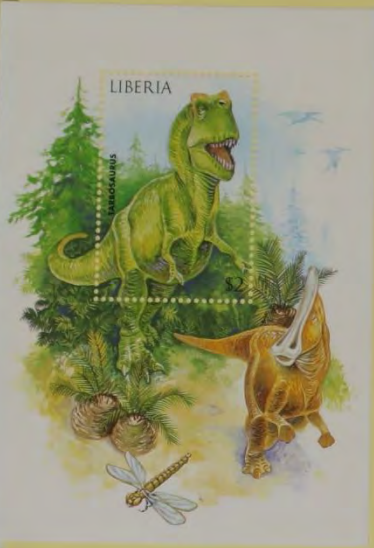

Mao Zedong (1893-1976)
Born to a peasant farmer in Hunan province, Mao Zedong became a founder of the Chinese Communist Party in 1921. Quickly emerging as the Party leader, he was instrumental in leading the revolution and the establishment of the People's Republic of China in 1949. He was especially loyal to Chiang Kai-shek and the forces loyal to Chiang Kai-shek. Mao Zedong was engaged in a deadly civil war. By 1949 the Communists had gained control of most of the mainland and Mao Zedong was proclaimed Chairman of the Central People's Government of China. Year of his controversial attempts to direct China included the Great Leap Forward (1958-1960) and the Cultural Revolution (1966-1969).

Zhou Enlai (1898-1976)
A colleague of Mao Zedong, Zhou Enlai served as the first prime minister of the People's Republic of China from the inception of the country in 1949 until his death in 1976. He was a statesman and diplomat who played a key role in the founding of the Communist Party of China. He was especially loyal to Mao Zedong and the forces loyal to Mao Zedong. Zhou Enlai was engaged in a deadly civil war. By 1949 the Communists had gained control of most of the mainland and Zhou Enlai was proclaimed Chairman of the Central People's Government of China. Year of his controversial attempts to direct China included the Great Leap Forward (1958-1960) and the Cultural Revolution (1966-1969).

Deng Xiaoping (1904-1987)
A member of the Communist Chinese Party since the 1920s when a student in Paris, Deng Xiaoping spent a long time in the United States from 1919 to 1925. He returned to the Republic of China (Taiwan) from 1925. Deng Xiaoping was expelled during the chaos of 1955. Deng Xiaoping returned to China in 1973. He was appointed to the post of vice premier and gradually worked his way up to become the paramount leader of China. Deng Xiaoping led China to begin investment and led to significant growth in the Chinese economy.

Jiang Zemin 1926
Jiang Zemin joined the Chinese Communist Party's ruling Politburo in 1977, after taking over the post of vice premier from Deng Xiaoping. He was appointed as the first president of the People's Republic of China in 1989. He was appointed general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party in June of 1989 following the death of Hu Yaobang. He was appointed vice premier of that same year. Jiang was appointed to powerful post of chairman of the Chinese Military Commission. Since 1993, he has also acted as China's president to lead of the country. He has been instrumental in the reform and modernization of the Communist Party as the dominant political force in China.
